Part 2: Learning and Teaching
Learning Outcomes	On successful completion of this module students will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Understand some critical and discourse theories that account for relationships between the linguistic features of texts and the social and cultural contexts of their production. (Component A) Understand the importance of lexical and grammatical choices in metaphor and myth in representation. (Component A) Apply critical and discourse theories to the analysis of some contemporary texts that show evidence of ideological themes such as immigration, gender, political persuasion and leadership. (Component B) Evaluate some of the different methods that have been developed for the critical analysis of ideologies and power relations for which there is linguistic evidence in texts. (Component B) Students will be able to demonstrate their knowledge, understanding and intellectual skills by analysing and evaluating different approaches to the critical analysis of texts and by developing and applying an appropriate methodology to such analysis.

Syllabus Outline	The module aims to integrate the more theoretical approaches in critical and cultural theory that originate in European scholarship with the more empirical tradition that has developed in Anglo-American linguistics. It will incorporate the following components: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • An introduction to theories, approaches and perspectives in critical discourse analysis including analysis of lexical choice, modality, transitivity, text patterns, figures of speech (including metaphor) and style • Description, interpretation and explanation of the ideologies that underlie specific texts (interviews, speeches, media reports etc.) through analysis of relevant linguistic features (e.g. lexis, modality, transitivity, metaphor and argument structure). • An Introduction to some methods that can be used in the critical discourse analysis including the discourse-historical approach, the discourse-space approach, critical metaphor analysis and rhetorical theory. • An explanation of how some existing concepts such as cohesion, coherence, narrative structure, genre and classical rhetoric may be adapted to a critical linguistics perspective. • An understanding of how the systematic analysis of metaphor (critical metaphor analysis) can contribute to our understanding of discourse.
Contact Hours	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • There will be one scheduled lecture and one seminar for each student over the duration of two 12 week teaching blocks.
Teaching and Learning Methods	There is a teaching handbook for each semester containing: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Guided week by week background reading • Lecture titles and lecture aims • Copies of OHPs used in the lectures and seminars – some to be completed during the lecture. • Activities that we will do in the seminars Selected texts for analysis will include the following: Multimedia Advertisements Websites of pressure groups Cartoon animations Spoken Political speeches Song lyrics Written Party political manifestos Press reports Teaching and learning methods: Lecture input Presentations by individuals or groups on selected topics Guided reading

Part 3: Assessment
Assessment Strategy	Assessment requires submission of a critical analysis of a text at the end of TB1 and a three hour written examination at the end of TB2. These assessment artefacts are designed to measure the level and depth of understanding of concepts related to Critical Discourse, the breadth of reading and the level of analytical skill relevant to empowering students in their lives.
