Part 2: Description

Overview: Not applicable

Features: Not applicable

Educational aims: Research Methods provides opportunities for students to build on the skills and knowledge gained in Foundation for Research by in depth examination of the core research methodologies relevant to their field of LLM studies. By critically engaging with examples of the use of these core methodologies in practice, students will be enabled to hone critical thinking and communication skills and engage with models of good practice in the discipline relevant to both academic studies and professional practice. The goal is to encourage the student to see themselves as a reflective and effective legal researcher able to evaluate the work of others to produce cogent and well researched legal writing. These activities are at the center of both academic and professional legal practice.

Outline syllabus: Students will be required to develop their understanding of legal research and research processes in order to:

- (a) enable them to engage effectively with their studies;
- (b) enable them to respond to emerging legal issues and problems critically and constructively, and;
- (c) support them in developing an appropriate dissertation project.

The core elements of the syllabus are:

Methodologies in practice;

Research-related skills development;

The development of current awareness and the ability to understand the implications of issues from both legal and professional perspectives.

Part 3: Teaching and learning methods

Teaching and learning methods: This module will be delivered via the medium of two hour weekly interactive workshops. The workshop format is appropriate for skills development as its interactive approach permits both demonstration/illustration and practice within the formal teaching environment.

Module Learning outcomes: On successful completion of this module students will achieve the following learning outcomes.

MO1 A critical understanding of the range of research methodologies and methods that are used in legal research, in particular an appreciation of the scope and limits of doctrinal legal research.

MO2 An ability to reflect objectively on the nature of research practice and to communicate that effectively in a professional context

MO3 An ability to critically analyse legal research from the perspective of the methodology and methods adopted therein.

MO4 A critical awareness of the standards of good academic writing and practice, that can be used throughout the student's LLM studies, including the ethical implications of different choices in legal research

MO5 An ability to reflect on the skills that they have developed in the course of the programme and how this relates to their professional development and practice

Hours to be allocated: 150

Contact hours:

Independent study/self-guided study = 126 hours

Face-to-face learning = 24 hours

Total = 150

Part 4: Assessment

Assessment strategy:

Task 1 – A group presentation analysing the significance and implications of a current issue for law and/or professional practice. (Duration - 25 minutes; 40% of total mark for the module)

Task 2 - A dissertation proposal, incorporating methodological considerations and a reflection on the development of their idea across their studies. (Word Limit 2000 words; 60% of total mark for the module.)

Learning outcomes will be assessed by both tasks. Both assessments require students to undertake independent research building on material covered in the workshop sessions. Both assessments are designed with the specific aim of helping students to connect the ideas and practices of good academic research with the study and research they will conduct throughout the whole LLM and in their on-going professional life.

The Group Presentation will allow students to develop valuable graduate attributes, such as team work, organisation, effective communication and current awareness, which will support them in their future professional lives.

The Dissertation Proposal will allow students to gain early feedback and advice in the formation of the dissertation plans, thus supporting their success on the Dissertation module.
