Part 2: Learning and Teaching
Learning Outcomes	 On successful completion of this module students will be able to: 1. use a variety of creative idea generation and research strategies to initiate and develop fictional ideas (Component A, 1); 2. collaborate in the creative development of imaginative script ideas for short film production (Component A, 1); 3. understand and apply the principles of dramatic writing, the elements of narrative design and the distinctive features of the short film screenplay form (Component A, 1); 4. situate work in the broader context of screenwriting and fictional media production (Component A, 1);
	 demonstrate an understanding of the principles of genre and audience engagement (Component A, 1); demonstrate skills in constructive criticism, script analysis and creative editing (Component A, 1); use professional writing craft skills including vocabulary and layout to a basic level (Component A, 1); communicate their ideas verbally and in writing (Component A, 1).
Syllabus Outline	The aim of this module is to introduce students to the professional craft of writing fiction for the screen via series of lectures, seminars and workshops designed to develop creating development strategies, screenwriting skills, including script analysis and an understanding and appreciation of the main elements of dramatic narrative such as three act structure, character function and dialogue.

	Indicative content includes: short film - strengths and weaknesses; creating emotional engagement; target audience and demographics; autobiography and personal themes; basic screenwriting vocabulary; professional screenplay writing vocabulary and form; subtext - symbolism and metaphor; genre and tone; visual style and non-verbal storytelling; writing believable dialogue.
	This will create a series of foundational understandings and skills that students can revisit and deepen as they develop and specialize through the future levels of the award.
	Although the primary focus is on the development of short fiction film scripts, the module will establish the importance of the script as a blueprint for many forms of media production, showing how the principles of script writing apply to longer fiction forms, such as feature film and also to factual genre, such as documentary.
	The emphasis of module is to concentrate on research, development and the process of writing. Student will research, develop and pitch a number of ideas and take them through an early testing process of writing a premise and outline in order to select the strongest ideas for further development. Students will then work on selected projects to expand and build the narrative and dramatic potential of the ideas through character development, treatment and step outline through to the first draft script. The writing practice will be set in the context of professional screenwriting craft standards, and will critically examine some important industry themes such as the interplay between genre and audience expectation and satisfaction.
	A further objective of this module is to develop a slate of screenplays, which will be competitively selected for production in the Creating Screen Fiction module.
Contact Hours/Scheduled Hours	Students receive approximately 40 hours of scheduled contact time.
Teaching and Learning Methods	The teaching and learning will take place via lectures, seminars, tutorials and writing workshops. During the writing workshops, students will undertake creative writing tasks (e.g. development of character breakdowns) and script analysis (e.g. script reports of published scripts/extracts) in order to develop understandings about creative development, how dramatic elements work and professional screenplay form.
	Formative assessment of idea development and some writing exercises will take place via verbal feedback from tutors in writing workshops. Added to this, there will also be a process of peer feedback encompassing verbal constructive criticism and/or written analysis, which will facilitate the development of student work.
	Alongside, there is a clearly timetabled series of set script development tasks to be achieved through independent study during the teaching weeks, which will be formatively assessed through tutorials and peer feedback in writing workshops and then summatively assessed in the Portfolio requirement.
	The Portfolio should contain a well-rounded selection of documents designed to facilitate students' development across the range of skills, including writing, researching, script analysis and creative development. It will include the first draft script and other script development and supporting documents as outlined in the Module Handbook.
	These may include, for example: personal ideas journal, creative writing exercises, lecture notes, supporting research and contextual materials, critical writing such as the evaluation of film genre (e.g. demonstrated in the published screenplay as compared to the realised film).
	Scheduled learning will include a variety of teaching and learning activity including lectures, seminars, tutorials (project supervision), writing and pitching workshops as well as screenings and a presentation session = 40 hours.
	Independent learning includes hours engaged with essential reading, creative

Key Information Sets Information N.B. PLACEHOLDER	Key Information Sets (KIS) are produced at programme level for all programmes that this module contributes to, which is a requirement set by HESA/HEFCE. KIS are comparable sets of standardised information about undergraduate courses allowing prospective students to compare and contrast between programmes they are interested in applying for.

	Guidance as to the contents of the Portfolio is contained in the Module Handbook. Some of the assignments will be written collaboratively. However, it will be possible to weigh the balance of the individual students' effort and contribution via the particular nature of the research, documentation and evaluation that will also form part of the portfolio requirement.
