Teaching and Learning Methods: The module is delivered by way of a blended learning approach using live time collaborate on-line lectures as the centre piece for study and around which other student centred learning activities are employed including group work, recorded lectures, tutor hours and formative exercises. The live contact commitment is five fortnightly two hour sessions, Email discussion groups and virtual learning environments (VLEs) and other technology-aided means are also employed. It can also take place in a work-based setting.

The module will be delivered by means of a series of on-line lectures and directed reading examining the key principles and relevant legal criteria relating to a number of topics of importance to construction professionals by bringing together the contractual and strategic aspects of construction and commercial law. On-line Lectures will be used to enable students to support their own independent learning by exploring deeper practical and legal issues and receiving formative feedback. Occasional speakers will be used to provide up to date material and context to the applications of the subject area.

Presentations by and to the group by the students will also be used to enable students to develop the skills and capabilities to analyse problems, negotiate, make decisions and present solutions to problems.

The formative work in the presentation will be supportive to the final assessments as they will provide research material useful to the final report.

Those taking this module by distance learning will receive learning materials, and will, in addition expect to have regular on line attendance through tutorials conducted via the university's virtual learning environment. Use will also be made of the discussion facilities in Blackboard to ensure that distance learning students are actively engaged in their learning.

The study hours for the module credit is based on the following:

Face-to-face /Online lectures: 15 hours
Online tutorials: 5 hours
Reading pre and post sessions: 40 hours
Accessing recorded lectures: 20 hours
Studying work file and related activities: 50 hours
Preparation and participation in Assessment 25 hours

Part 3: Assessment

The assessment strategy adopted by this module involves the student taking part in a negotiation exercise which is run on-line before submitting a follow up report online via blackboard. The negotiation exercise involves the use of synchronous chat room platform to support a real time discussion which is also recorded for assessment.

The student has some flexibility in choosing which role they will play in relation to a scenario and which is of particular interest to the student and focusing on the same.

The other requirement in the field is for the student to be able to explain the theory behind the law and put it across it layman's terms.

The design of the coursework will be such as to prevent plagiarism as it will involve reflection on student's practice and experience

The Report is a 1500 word report suitable for dissemination to senior management.
