Teaching and Learning Methods: Lectures provide an introduction and summary of the topic area. These are delivered by a wide variety of specialists from professional programmes, library, technology enhanced learning.

Seminars/group work include discussion and use of information provided to support learning – student led facilitated by research active staff member.

Independent learning includes hours engaged with essential reading and research activities in relation to undertaking a research project. Face to face support and email support with individual supervisor for each research group.

Essential reading/preparation for each day (information on Bb and in handbook)

Essential reading is listed in the module handbook, and an electronic research reader is made available online on Blackboard. Students will also access reading specific to their research topic area.

Up to 31 teaching contact hours:

These will include lectures and workshops. Delivered by a wide range of specialist staff from a variety of programmes and disciplines across the University.

A variety of approaches will be used which may include a variety of learning and teaching methods will be employed including: lectures, seminars, workshops, group work, tutorials, self-directed study, individual and group supervision.

Part 3: Assessment

Component A: Dissertation Portfolio (5000 words maximum).

Students will be asked to submit a 'dissertation portfolio' containing the following two tasks, which altogether will be a maximum of 5000 words.

1. A journal article prepared for submission (maximum 4000 words).
2. A reflection on their research (maximum 1000 words).

Rationale: This assessment will allow the student to present the design and execution of a primary or secondary research study that they have undertaken. The reflection will provide them space to justify their decisions in carrying out the research, and to include an evaluation that would not normally be able to be accommodated in the journal article. The word count reflects the requirements of writing for publication, and in doing so, this process will better prepare and align students for evidence-based practice.

Formative assessment: occurs throughout the module as the student works with the allocated dissertation supervisor.
