Part 2: Description
This module explores Bristol's thriving and distinctive the film and television industries. It will consider their historical development and contemporary composition – their size, location and two major specialisms: animation and natural history filmmaking. It will analyse their importance to Bristol's cultural and economic life, and their relationship to the city's sustainability credentials. Students will research and critically examine the wide range of companies that comprise Bristol's film and television 'cluster', and situate them within their wider economic, socio-political and policy contexts. This will provide a detailed, critical and extremely current understanding of how one of the UK's major regional hubs is shaped by contemporary industry trends.
Part 3: Assessment
The module aims to give students a critical understanding of Bristol's film and television cluster, and to enable them to develop an independent research project. Both assessments further develop students' research and (oral or written) presentation skills. Component A: 10 min presentation Students will present the initial research for their case studies to their tutor and peers. Component B: 2500-word case study Students will design and develop their own independent research project with support from their tutor.
