Historical and Contemporary Developments of the Discipline of Economics in Various Societies: United States; United Kingdom, Europe, Latin America, Asia

Part 3: Teaching and learning methods

Teaching and learning methods: Lectures will focus on core material, with a particular focus on theory and its application. Seminars will focus on investigating and practising the lecture material; and will involve a mixture of tutorials, group presentations and practical classes. Students may work within groups/teams in seminars, and will be encouraged to summarise and present concepts and ideas and engage in critical discourse.

In addition staff will be available during the semester during their office hours for face to face meetings. Staff can also be approached virtually through e-mail.

Extensive use will be made of Blackboard for weekly guided independent study work; to support students' learning; to facilitate interactions between students.

Students will also be directed towards the University Library online Study Skills resources at <http://www1.uwe.ac.uk/students/studysupport/studyskills.aspx> for the development of skills appropriate to the level and style of the module.

Module Learning outcomes: On successful completion of this module students will achieve the following learning outcomes.

MO1 Analyse the historical trajectory of economic thought.

MO2 Demonstrate a critical understanding of the historical variety and pluralist nature of economic thought.

MO3 Evaluate the historical roots of contemporary economic discourses.

MO4 Explain the social factors (material, cultural, etc.) that shape the history of economics.

MO5 Synthesise the linkages between economic history and the development of economic theory.

MO6 Evaluate the place and function of economics as a social science in society.

MO7 Apply effective research strategies and problem solving skills in a real world context.

MO8 Articulate and defend ideas in a variety of contexts.

Hours to be allocated: 150

Contact hours:

Independent study/self-guided study = 114 hours

Face-to-face learning = 36 hours

Reading list: The reading list for this module can be accessed at readinglists.uwe.ac.uk via the following link <https://uwe.rl.talis.com/modules/umedke-15-3.html>

Part 4: Assessment

Assessment strategy: This module deploys a mix of formative and summative assessment, both through an individual paper on a contemporary issue, based on texts with a particular critical perspective.

The coursework is designed to assess student's abilities to apply core concepts in the module to a real-world problem. Students will also gain formative feedback through class discussions based on drafts of their papers, providing the opportunity to compare ideas and engage with alternative interpretations. The learning from the coursework will develop the student's critical capacity and support the requirements for the paper, thus providing formative learning opportunities as well as summative feedback.

Summative Assessment:

Students will be allocated one of a set of topical cases/texts on which they will write an individual 2000 word paper.

Students will undertake a final online exam (2 hours in duration/effort time) to be completed within 24 hours for the module.

Formative Assessment:

Engagement with other students in seminars that encourages a sense of belonging.

Weekly discussions on the themes covered in the syllabus
