Part 2: Description

Overview: Not applicable

Features: Not applicable

Educational aims: The aim of the subject is to provide an opportunity for a sustained piece of independent research in an area of law additional to those areas studied within the seven Foundation subjects.

Outline syllabus: Students are given a choice of topic for their Independent Research Project (IRP) from a list of tasks prepared by members of the teaching team, and will reflect staff teaching and research interests. In line with the JASB requirements for the "eighth area of legal study", the research topics will fall outside the taught syllabi of the seven Foundation subjects

Part 3: Teaching and learning methods

Teaching and learning methods: The basic class contact pattern is as follows:

In any academic year, the basic class contact for the subject is normally as follows:

At the beginning of Teach Block 2 (FT) or the September Induction tuition session (PT) or shortly thereafter:

1 hour subject introductory lecture

2 x 2 hours interactive research and referencing workshops with the Law Librarians

Subsequently group or individual drop in sessions to discuss progress, problems etc. with tutor as required/necessary.

Consequently, in any academic year, there will be maximum of 37/18½ hours (FT/PT) of contact time.

Undertaking an individual research project towards the end of the course means that students can use the skills they have acquired on the course to analyse and discuss a topic which is of particular interest to them. They need to undertake research using primary and secondary sources and to be able to evaluate critically those sources to produce a coherent and well thought out argument. Communication through the written word needs to be clear and concise as a maximum word limit of 5000 words is imposed on the project. Students will have already established writing skills through the production of coursework (four pieces in total) they will have received feedback on writing style in most of the core subjects prior to undertaking the project. Most topics call for analysis of the current state of the law and a requirement to consider as appropriate future developments and opportunities for reform in the particular area of the law chosen.

The IRP is an opportunity for students to both analyse legal information and communicate their findings efficiently in the context of an extended piece of their own work. They need to show a logical approach to argument, to use language accurately and to document their sources correctly. It is also an opportunity for students to illustrate how they have learnt to take responsibility for their own independent learning.

Students will be encouraged to make full use of the printed and electronic resources available to them. These include (amongst other things) a range of printed case reports, legislation, texts and journals, as well as a range of electronic journals and a wide variety of resources available through web sites and information gateways (including online study and legal research sites provided by the Law Library). The University Library's web pages provide access to subject relevant resources and services, and to the library catalogue. Many resources can be accessed remotely.

We have increased the amount of initial guidance given to students by providing introductory lectures and workshops at the start of block 2 (Full-time) and Year 2 (Part time) when the project is to be completed. The lectures which are backed up by materials placed on Blackboard concentrate on writing style and presentation. In the workshops (which are delivered by the law librarians) revision is given on research methods and help given with advanced research concentrating on journals as well as text books and then cases and legislation where appropriate.

The submission date for the project will normally be end April/early May. This should leave a period for revision of other subjects between submission of the IRP and the start of TB2 and Year 2 examinations.

Module Learning outcomes: On successful completion of this module students will achieve the following learning outcomes.

A1 Demonstrate their knowledge and understanding of a specific area of law within an identified topic which falls outside the syllabus content of the Foundation subjects

B1 Plan and implement an appropriate legal research strategy in the context of a legal topic

C1 Select relevant authorities and apply them in their response to the task

C2 Critically evaluate the subject matter of the project

C3 Produce a coherent response to the research task, as identified

D1 Communicate their understanding of the subject matter of the project in a manner and style appropriate to the task

D2 Show time and information management skills by responding to a specific task requiring research in an area of law on which there has been no tuition

D3 Work independently, over an extended period of time, in planning and executing an appropriate research strategy

Hours to be allocated: 150

Contact hours:

Independent study/self-guided study = 113 hours

Face-to-face learning = 37 hours

Total = 150
