Outline syllabus: Introductory Large Group Session

A lecture of the key legal areas covered by the course and a review of the core skills of case analysis, conferencing and the written plan required.

Small Group Session 1

Review of pre session preparation and undertake case analysis of a sex discrimination scenario. This session will allow students to practice the skill of case analysis by looking at the legal and factual strengths and weakness of the case. This is a universal skill and is essential for conference preparation.

Small Group Session 2

This session examines unlawful race discrimination by way of a conferencing exercise. This exercise also allows students to practice the skills of case analysis by looking at the legal and factual strengths and weakness of the case.

Small Group Session 3

This is the Practice Assessment which is a conference with the lay client in the context of a sex discrimination case.

Small Group Session 4

This will review the answers to SAQ's on the core areas covered by the module and there is a further opportunity to conduct a conference in the context of a sex discrimination and unfair dismissal case with peer review.

Small Group Session 5

This session considers dismissal and race discrimination in the context of an upcoming tribunal hearing involving group work on case analysis and preparation together with a client conference and a negotiation exercise. Revision queries are also dealt with.

Part 3: Teaching and learning methods

Teaching and learning methods: Each Session is 3.5 hours of interactive working. In addition, there is 1 tutor led Large Group Session of 1.5 hours. This is a total of 22.5 contact hours.

Students undertake Independent Learning in preparation for their workshops, with essential reading (from a designated textbook), and case study preparation. Student are also given MCQ's with answers and an explanation for the answers to allow the student to check their understanding on core topics.

Students undertake Scheduled Learning through their tutor led workshops in which students predominantly spend time working in small groups analysing the case study problems undertaking skills exercises and with whole group review of learning outcomes with their tutor. In one session SAQ's with a mark scheme are used to allow student to gauge their understanding, the level of detail needed and a structured approach to advice.

Students will undertake Consolidation Work but considering Points to Note for the case scenario considered in each session and two sample conference plans and using this to compare and reflect on their own case analysis.

Module Learning outcomes: On successful completion of this module students will achieve the following learning outcomes.

MO1 Understand the law relating to claims of race and sex discrimination under the Equality Act 2010 – direct discrimination, harassment, victimisation, limitation, the burden of proof and vicarious liability and how quantum is assessed

MO2 Understand the law relating to wrongful dismissal

MO3 Understand the law relating to unfair dismissal

MO4 Review the case study material and identify the core legal/evidential and procedural issues in relation to liability and quantum

MO5 Undertake an effective case analysis that: identifies the factual and legal issues and how they relate to each other; considers the perspective of the client's case and the outcome sought; considers the perspective of the opponent's case; identifies the strengths and weaknesses of each side; considers how weaknesses in the evidential case may be compensated for; identifies where further research is needed

MO6 Prepare a written conference plan for the advice to be given on whether settlement of the case should be considered and, if so, an appropriate figure for settlement

MO7 Deliver the advice in an oral conference with a client

Hours to be allocated: 100

Contact hours:

Independent study/self-guided study = 77.5 hours

Face-to-face learning = 22.5 hours

Total = 100

Part 4: Assessment

Assessment strategy: Across the SGS's students have opportunities to practise the core skills needed to pass the assessment – case analysis, knowledge queries, practice of a conference, tutor and peer feedback on their delivery of a conference. Individual tutor feedback on a conference and the written plan is given in a formative assessment.

The learning outcomes demonstrated during the conference are:

Conduct the conference in a structured and efficient way and cover all relevant issues in a logical sequence.

Communicate effectively with the client.

Prepare and conduct conferences dealing with and advising on the legal strengths and weaknesses of the claim.

The evidential strengths and weaknesses of a claim.

The value of the claim.

Proposals for settlement that reflect the advice on merit.

The assessment has one element. It is a skills exercise with a written task building on the core skills already taught on the BPTC, adapted to the new area of law covered by the option. The current skill is conferencing and so students must conduct a client conference of 20 minutes and hand in a written conference plan covering the advice to the client on liability and quantum.

The assessment is carried out in controlled conditions in an assessment room with an actor/tutor playing the lay client and a separate tutor assessing. Alternatively, a tutor can conduct the role play and assess if necessary.

The student instructions containing a brief to counsel and supporting documents containing all the case information are released to the students one week prior to the assessment (two weeks for part time students). During this week the students will undertake a case analysis, prepare their conference plan and research the law.

These stages demonstrate the learning outcomes of:

Understanding the objectives of a conference and the factual, legal, procedural and evidential issues that should be raised in a conference.

Conduct the conference in a structured and efficient way and cover all relevant issues in a logical sequence.

Advise on relevant law and issues during the conference.

The student must then conduct the conference, during which they must ask a few relevant questions and advise appropriately on the strengths and weaknesses of the case, how much the case is worth and whether an attempt to settle the case should be made, advising on an appropriate settlement figure (which is in line with their advice).

As per other assessment on the BPTC, the assessment performance must not breach the applicable Professional Conduct rules or – thought a specific issue or overall poor advice that puts the client at risk, breach the BSB regulation regarding a Red Light Fail/Fatal Flaw.
