Part 2: Description
This module examines nearly 700 years of British history and considers political, social, economic, cultural, religious and imperial history from the fourteenth-century Black Death through to the twenty-first century. After an introduction, we move on to introduce the framework of governmental institutions, administration and politics in the British Isles in the late medieval and early modern periods, as well as considering the social and economic impact of the Black Death, taking in Tudor and Stuart divine right monarchy, the civil war and restoration, and the birth of party politics. We set Britain in a broader context by considering, for example, the Enlightenment, foreign policy and the development of the British empire. The module considers corruption and parliamentary reform as well as industrialisation, class, status and gender. Britain's relations with its next door neighbour, Ireland, have proved to be frequently controversial and so the broader 'United Kingdom' dimension in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries is also examined. In the twentieth century, war, welfare, imperial history and foreign policy are some of our major concerns as are gender, multiculturalism and secularisation. The module will be delivered through a combination of lectures and seminars. Although the module is clearly content-driven students will be encouraged to think carefully about the sources historians use to construct their arguments and the way in which academic debate is constructed from such sources. Seminar sessions will therefore use a combination of selected primary source material from the period (e.g. textual, visual, oral, quantitative), and selections of secondary literature from JSTOR and other digitised collections, which will be recommended via Blackboard and/or the module handbook.
Part 3: Assessment
Assessment Strategy Component A One three-hour examination. Students will be required to answer three questions relating to topics covered across the module. This exam format encourages students to engage with the module in its entirety.

Component B*1. Journal article review/comparison (1800 words)

Students are required to select one set of paired articles from the designated titles and critically evaluate the content and argument of each.

2. Seminar presentation and paper (1200 words)

Students are required to work in small groups to research a topic in depth, and give a 20 minute group presentation on this topic to other members of the seminar. Students are also required to submit an individual seminar paper which broadly covers the same ground as their individual contribution to the group presentation. Students are assessed on both the quality of their seminar paper and the presentation.

These two pieces of assessed coursework are designed to test a range of abilities from critical evaluation of academic literature to the clear and concise communication of ideas in both oral and written forms. The assessment strategy is designed to measure:

- a) critical understanding of concepts and topics relating to British history, as explored in the module [B1, B2]
- b) the ability to understand and critically assess journal literature [B1]
- c) the ability to present ideas in clear prose and observe appropriate academic standards (footnotes, bibliographies) [B1, B2]
- d) the ability to work collaboratively to plan and present group tasks [B2]
- e) the ability to communicate ideas clearly and concisely in oral presentations [B2]

Feedback for these assessments will be sent first to students electronically. All students will be required to attend personal feedback tutorials which will be a timetabled part of the module's contact hours.

Reading Strategy	Students will be expected to read the suggested secondary literature recommended and highlighted via Blackboard and/or the module handbook, and will be expected to analyse and comment upon such literature in seminars. Recommended reading for each session will be clearly indicated in the course literature and is readily available from the library (online and/or in hard copy). The following list is offered to provide validation panels/accrediting bodies with an indication of the type and level of information students may be expected to consult. As such, its currency may wane during the life span of the module specification. However, as indicated above, CURRENT advice on readings will be available via other more frequently updated mechanisms.
