Part 2: Learning and Teaching
Learning Outcomes	 On successful completion of this module students will be able to: Demonstrate knowledge of the key phases of the global film industry's development since the 1950s, in relation to production trends, circuits of distribution and exhibition practices (Components A and B). Demonstrate historical, critical and commercial awareness of the relationships between Hollywood and world cinema (Components A and B). Describe and analyse the transnational processes of globalisation and their impact on Hollywood and world cinema (Components A and B). Conceptualise and historicise categories such as 'world cinema', 'national cinema', 'art cinema', 'third cinema' and 'indie cinema' (Component B). Recognise the role of different forms of film criticism in re/producing categories of cinema (Component B). Express ideas clearly and accurately in written formats, and reference sources correctly (Components A and B).
Syllabus Outline	The module explores the complex industrial and cultural relationships between Hollywood and world cinema since the 1950s. The module introduces key phases in the global film industry's development, identifying changing production, distribution and exhibition practices. Students are also introduced to the concepts of globalisation and trans/national cinema, enabling them to develop commercial awareness of economic and cultural factors affecting the industry. The module also examines critical and cultural approaches to Hollywood and world cinema. Students explore different categories of film, such as 'art cinema', 'third cinema' and 'indie cinema', as ways of conceptualising the relationships between Hollywood and world cinema. We also consider the role of film criticism, festivals, international awards and websites in promoting and re/producing these categories. This might also include looking at specific trends or themes, e.g., the child in world cinema, women filmmakers, new queer cinema, slow cinema, nomadic cinema.

Contact Hours	There will be 72 hours of contact time over the course of the module. Teaching will take place in rooms designed for interactive activities including group work and the screening of film clips.
Teaching and Learning Methods	 Scheduled learning: Most weeks, a one hour lecture is accompanied by a film screening, followed by a 2 hour seminar. Students will also have the opportunity for tutorials at key points in the year, providing support for assignments. Occasionally, the scheduled learning will involve external visits to one of Bristol's art house cinemas and/or attending one of the various film festivals held in the city. Student diversity will be taken into account when planning these trips. The trips do not directly relate to assessment, but reasonable adjustments will be made to ensure students with disabilities are not disadvantaged if they cannot attend. Independent learning : Students are expected to spend approximately two to three hours a week preparing for lectures and seminars by completing set readings). Some weeks, especially in Semester 2, this will also include a set exercise, designed to help students develop their critical case study assignment. These readings and exercises will be clearly outlined in the Module Handbook and on Blackboard.
Key Information Sets Information	Key Information Sets (KIS) are produced at programme level for all programmes that this module contributes to, which is a requirement set by HESA/HEFCE. KIS are comparable sets of standardised information about undergraduate courses allowing prospective students to compare and contrast between programmes they are interested in applying for. Part 3: Assessment
Assessment Strategy	The module aims to develop students' historical, critical and commercial awareness of the global film industry, and to enhance students' conceptual thinking and critical writing skills. These skills feed into the assessment strategy.
	Component A assesses students' ability to explain aspects of the industry's post-war development. A seen paper is used to allow students to prepare appropriately, reducing anxiety and emphasising the importance of selecting material effectively. The use of controlled conditions ensures good knowledge and understanding and reduces the possibility of plagiarism.
	Component B recognises diversity by encouraging students to enhance their skills in areas of specific interest, at the level of both content and form. Semester Two's seminars include exercises to help students develop the assignment, ensuring appropriate academic and technical support, as well as 'designing out' plagiarism.
	The Assessment: Component A: Exam (2 hours, seen paper). Students will be given two hours to answer the paper, assessing their knowledge of key phases of the global film industry's development and ability to analyse transnational processes and the relationships between Hollywood and world cinema.
	Component B: Critical Case Study (4000 words). Students will devise a case study related to one of the categories of cinema studied in Semester 2, including consideration of the role played by film criticism in re/producing these categories. The assignment incorporates a conceptual and/or historical framework for the case study example; the case study itself can take different forms, including the option of writing a piece of film criticism suitable for a specific film publication.
