Part 2: Description
This module provides an opportunity for students to conduct specialist studies in the field of Phenomenology. Covering one of the richest areas of contemporary philosophical activity, this module will provide students with an overview of some of the major authors belonging to the phenomenological tradition, such as Husserl, Heidegger, Sartre, Gadamer, Arendt, and Derrida, and of some of their critics. Its focus will be on a philosophical current that has developed after the year 1900 and still plays an important role in today's philosophical debates. Students will examine a combination of primary texts and philosophical problems deriving from them. In addition, since there is a vast amount of current research underway in this area, students will acquire an understanding of one of the most important trajectories initiated in the past century and still being pursued in philosophy. At one level, this module is a primer for further philosophical research; at another, it is a survey of some of the most foundational works for the contemporary humanities and social sciences. Teaching will be by lecture and seminar, supported by MyUWE and Blackboard online learning resources. Following the first two weeks, which introduce the defining characteristics of the philosophical movement under consideration, the module will introduce students to a number of fundamental texts and to the way they provide the basis for understanding the different and often conflicting views that are present in this area of philosophy. Because the seminars will begin with developing students' abilities to get to grips with philosophical problems independently, students will be encouraged to lead the seminars from the earliest possible stage, effectively turning them into self-organized reading groups.

Part 3: Assessment: Strategy and Details

The assessment for the module will consist in a 2000 word essay (50%) as well as a 30 minute oral assessment (50%). The oral assessment can consist either in a session of questions and answers concerning the course material, or in student presentations on a subject different from the one they have chosen for the essay followed by questions. The exact requirements for the oral assessment/ time-limit for presentations/ suitable topics/ example questions etc. will be set out in the module handbook at the beginning of the year. The key-component of this kind of evaluation will consist in the open-ended interaction with the examiner: students will have to be able to respond to questions about the most salient themes of the course, and examiners can probe their understanding of their chosen topic. This form of assessment also helps students develop valuable skills in presenting information orally. The complementarity between these two modalities of assessment hinges on the difference between, on the one hand, the ability to plan their time and produce a well-crafted, researched and finished work (essay in component B), and, on the other, the acquired capacity to engage in an open critical discussion about the course material (oral assessment in component A).
