Part 2: Learning and Teaching
Learning Outcomes	On successful completion of this module students will be able to: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. have extended their understanding of a range of epistemological issues in relation to research (Component A); 2. be able to design and execute a research based study with appropriate attention to methodological rigour (Component A); 3. have a critically informed understanding of the use of specific research instruments (Component A); 4. be able to situate their own research interests within an appropriate body of literature and theoretical framework (Component A); 5. have developed a research based argument and/or practices, including a self-critique of the limitations of their study (Component A); 6. have developed their knowledge and skills as practitioners, drawing together theory and practice that clearly articulates professional practice (Component A); 7. be able to demonstrate an awareness of, and engagement with, appropriate ethical issues (Component A);
Syllabus Outline	The content of the module will reflect individual needs of students, but will focus on the execution of students' empirical research and the writing of their dissertations. The dissertations are likely to include: Introduction; Contextualisation; Methodology; Data Collection and Analysis; Implications; Recommendations and Conclusions.

Contact Hours	Each student will be allocated a dissertation supervisor to support their studies. Support will comprise: Individual tutorial support (usually 8 hours per student) with larger support group meetings and documentation (Dissertation Handbook). The student is required to attend at least one tutorial per term with their supervisor.
Teaching and Learning Methods	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Initial induction lecture and workshop / seminar • Additional support workshops (subject to change according to student need, but examples are 'writing your dissertation' and 'completing your ethics form') • Small group support workshops (peer support and sharing experiences) • Individual tutorials with dissertation supervisor • Independent learning for essential reading, data collection and analysis, dissertation writing and completion.
Key Information Sets Information	N/A at M level
Reading Strategy	All students will be encouraged to make full use of the print and electronic resources available to them through membership of the University. These include a range of electronic journals and a wide variety of resources available through web sites and information gateways. The University Library's web pages provide access to subject relevant resources and services, and to the library catalogue. Many resources can be accessed remotely.
