Section 2: Programme Overview, Aims and Learning Outcomes

Part A: Programme Overview, Aims and Learning Outcomes

Overview: The Association for Business Psychology defines Business Psychology as “the study and practice of improving working life. It combines an understanding of the science of human behaviour with experience of the world of work to attain effective and sustainable performance for both individuals and organisations”.

The MSc in Business Psychology is both a theoretical and an applied MSc programme drawing from expertise in Psychology and from the Business School at UWE. This innovative programme takes an interdisciplinary approach combining understanding of psychology at work and key areas of business success. The programme focuses on increasing the skills required to improve working life for individuals and organisations. It is aimed at increasing individuals core employment related skills to improve their leadership, work relationships and personal efficiency at work, as well as improving their overall organisational outcomes.

Educational Aims: Business Psychology (BP) is an applied science that investigates how to increase individual and organisational effectiveness. It utilises scientific research methods to investigate people, workplaces and organisations to better align their multiple, sometimes competing needs. This programme aims to develop these skills in individuals to enable them to work with employees and workplaces using the skills and competencies of business psychology.

The programme aims to achieve this through the following: embedding scientist-practitioner thinking and practice in Business Psychology; developing practitioners who are fit for practice; developing practitioners who are competent to work legally and ethically in the field; fostering new developments in the field of BP; and promoting the value of Business Psychology nationally and internationally. The programme also covers key skills required for individual and organisational success.

Programme Learning Outcomes:

On successful completion of this programme graduates will achieve the following learning outcomes.

Programme Learning Outcomes

- PO1. Critically apply current knowledge in business psychology to professional settings and practice, ensuring sensitivity to the business context and through a scientist-practitioner approach.
