Section 2: Programme Overview, Aims and Learning Outcomes

Part A: Programme Overview, Aims and Learning Outcomes

Overview: The BA (Hons) Politics and International Relations programme (with Foundation Year) is a four year programme (Full-time), a five year programme (Sandwich), or an eight year programme (Part-time). This undergraduate programme offers students an opportunity to engage with the important area of Politics and International Relations. Students can study both aspects of the subject on an equal basis, or specialise in pathways in either Politics or International Relations, or indeed any combination in between. The combination of both Politics and International Relations into a single course, with maximum flexibility in the Levels 5 and 6, and a very wide range of available option choices, allows students to design their own programme of study as freely as possible. One of the most important and distinctive characteristics of Politics and International Relations at UWE is that it is academically rigorous, while using innovative methods of teaching and learning to develop skills and contacts needed for future study and employment. The programme offers the opportunity to explore Politics and International Relations at local, national and global levels, engaging in theoretical, empirical, and practical dimensions of the discipline.

Features of the programme: The programme offers entry via a Social Sciences interdisciplinary foundation year.

The programme supports one of the key aims of UWE, in seeking to foster a strong global outlook in students. It is designed to encourage innovation and creativity in assessing current opportunities, challenges, and processes in Politics and International Relations, thus preparing graduates for employment in both the private and public sectors in the UK and internationally;

Every student will have the opportunity to complete a work based learning opportunity related to Politics and International Relations;

To supplement the main teaching programme, students will be encouraged to attend additional events in the Faculty and University with relevance to the issues under consideration; they will have the opportunity to access other local activities which will enhance the learning outcomes of the programme; and they will be invited to attend conferences and seminars outside of Bristol;

Research is integrated into teaching throughout this programme. Sessions are informed by activities of relevant staff research, and the departmental research strengths are reflected in the design of the curriculum. Students are able to engage with research active staff through diverse means which may include, for example, supervision of final year projects, volunteer research placements, and support in attendance at relevant undergraduate conferences. Extra-curricular activities organised outside formal teaching sessions support the strengthening of associations between departmental research activity and student learning. For example, a range of guest speakers from state and private sector actors will be invited, who will guide and support student's development;

Students have access to the full range of career planning and employability services offered by UWE Careers during their period of study and for three years after graduation.

Educational Aims: The programme has the option to be entered via a thematically organised introduction to Social Sciences foundation year.

The programme aims to promote in its students capacity for outstanding learning, developing ready and able graduates who are active citizens, making a real contribution to their communities, workplaces and society; graduates with the skills, knowledge, attitude and confidence to create, critique, and make a difference to the world beyond university; graduates who are prepared for lifelong learning, personal-development, excellence and success in whatever fields they choose to work and participate.

The programme seeks to foster a strong global outlook in students. It is designed to encourage innovation and creativity in assessing current opportunities, challenges, and processes in Politics and International Relations, and in designing responses, thus preparing graduates for employment in both the private and public sectors, as well as in the third sector, in the UK and internationally. The programme is based on an understanding of Politics and International Relations as both a subject of academic study and a vocational discipline. The programme seeks to reflect this by:

Equipping students with an understanding of Politics and International Relations and related disciplines, especially focusing on current issues at the forefront of academic study.

Developing the analytical skills needed to make reasoned, creative and well informed judgments regarding the development and operation of domestic and international politics.

Assisting students to develop greater intellectual autonomy and to become independent learners.

Equipping students with the research skills and methodological knowledge needed to conduct their own research, such as in their project and placement module.

Refining students' ability to communicate effectively complex ideas in a diverse range of oral and written forms.

Encouraging effective decision-making, incorporating broad concerns in relation to issues such as development, sustainability, and global citizenship.

Assisting students to develop the qualities and transferable skills necessary for employment requiring the exercise of initiative and personal responsibility and decision-making.

Encouraging lifelong learning and personal development and thereby enabling students to be able to work with self-direction and originality and to make a positive contribution to society.

To acknowledge the wide diversity of students and their interests through a flexible programme, enabling the student to choose between a variety of modules and disciplines in order to meet their particular educational needs and to foster their individual development.

To provide an opportunity for international exchange and study abroad through the sandwich year.

To provide opportunity for placements.

Programme Learning Outcomes:

- D5. Ability to self-manage in order to be able to exercise the other skills identified above Assessment strategy: A range of assessment methods are employed to monitor student attainment of the full range of Learning Outcomes. Assessment incorporates the Department's assessment strategy and The QAA Code of Practice on Assessment of Students. The principles, procedures and processes of assessment for each module are described in each module handbook, which is provided to each student (online) at the start of the module.

Effective learning is achieved by employing a range of assessment approaches across the suite of modules that recognise differential approaches to learning. The development of a flexible, inclusive and accessible curriculum ensures a high quality learning experience for all students. The programme incorporates a range of innovative and novel assessments, many utilising new technologies.

The foundation year assessments build skills native to Politics and IR as part of a wider Social Sciences programme and tests knowledge retention appropriate to the Foundational Level.

The assessment strategy comprises formal tutor assessment, informal tutor assessment and informal peer review and feedback. Formal testing of the knowledge base, intellectual, subject specific and transferable skills is through a combination of exams, essays, case studies, presentations, projects and simulation games. Informal testing of intellectual, subject specific and transferable skills is through class interaction during work on current academic research and understanding, case studies, practical exercises and experiential exercises.

Technology Enhanced Learning (TEL) is integral to the subject matter within this programme. Many taught topics are technology rich and TEL is also used to supplement learning and to help student learn through assessment, e.g. through the use of virtual online tutorials.

The Assessment Strategy has been designed to support and enhance the development of both subject-based and generic key skills and allow students to realise their true potential. The focus is on assessments that link directly to employability relevant skills as well as assessments for learning of discipline content. Assessments are designed to achieve the learning outcomes for each module and this is described on the module specification.

Student support: Student support is provided by the programme manager and academic colleagues, usually module leaders, for all issues relating to the content, delivery and assessment of modules. The university's Student Advisors provide timely, accurate and confidential advice where necessary on all aspects of the provision, for example coursework and examination arrangements, extenuating circumstances procedures, as well as personal issues, including when relevant how to access the wider support provided by the University. This service is supported by extensive online resources.

At each level, students are assigned an Academic Personal Tutor from the academic staff that provides tailored support and guidance throughout the year.

An important part of the programme is the involvement of students. Student representatives are selected from the programme to serve on the Student Representatives Staff Forum (SRSF). These are held regularly to discuss issues raised by students in relation to their experience of studying at UWE and on the programme. Issues raised are discussed in an open and friendly atmosphere so that students feel able to contribute openly and honestly about their experiences. Any issues raised are taken forward for action by programme managers. Where appropriate they may be discussed at Departmental Committees or Faculty Academic Standards and Quality Committee.

Further student support is provided by the Admissions Office and Careers and Employability Services. Support to students with disability is offered both at the faculty level under the remit of the Leader of Widening Participation and centrally through the university's Disability Resource Centre.

In addition to the above The University's Student Services offers a range of services to support students during their time at university and beyond:

University Health Centre and general advice on 'Staying Healthy';

Well-being Services for students, including counselling and financial advice;

UWE volunteering, opportunities for students to get involved in the local community through the Community Volunteer Programme;

The Living Centre, for support with faith and spiritual matters;

Global student support, to help international students to make the most of living and studying in the UK.

Students have access to the full range of career planning and employability services offered by UWE Careers during their period of study and for three years after graduation.

Part C: Higher Education Achievement Record (HEAR) Synopsis

The Politics and International Relations programme at UWE offers students a wide-ranging and contemporary insight into today's political world. It focuses uniquely on politics as a vocation, equipping graduates with the necessary skills to build careers in government, civil service, NGOs, research organisations, and other relevant areas of the public and private sector. The course is taught by experienced staff members who are active researchers committed to delivering high quality teaching.

Part D: External Reference Points and Benchmarks

The following reference points and considerations were used in designing the programme:

University teaching and learning policies.

Staff research projects.

QAA Subject Benchmarks for Politics and International Studies.

The Programme Team has used these reference points and considerations to test the outcomes of the proposed programme award for compliance with the University's strategic priorities, teaching and learning and other policies, and the extent to which the proposal has appropriate currency in the wider academic, professional or vocational world.

In particular, the learning outcomes for the modules at level 6 are considered consistent with the QAA's descriptor for a higher education qualification at level 6: Bachelor's degree with honours. Graduates of the programme achieving an Honours classification will have developed a systematic understanding of a wide range of advanced Political and International Relations methods and transferable skills that are essential for future employment.

Moreover, the UWE strategic framework is embedded at all levels of study with particular reference to three modules at level 4 (Politics of Crisis and Change; Ethics and Power; and Critical Thinking) and 30 credits at Level 5 (Nature and Use of Research and Developing Self and Society). At level 6 students undertake the Social Sciences Project and Placement module and have the option to take subject modules tailored to introduce specific staff research expertise. Students on the programme have the option of a part-time study pathway. At each level, students are assigned a Personal Tutor from the academic staff that provides tailored support and guidance throughout the year.

Staff are actively involved in their own research, practice and knowledge exchange activities with relationships across a broad range of governmental, commercial and non-commercial organisations, and these links have informed the development of the programme. In addition, feedback from current students and graduates has helped to shape the programme, both in terms of content and assessment.

Part E: Regulations

Approved to University Regulations and Procedures.
