For coding purposes, a numerical sequence (1, 2, 3 etc.) should be used for successive programme specifications where 2 replaces 1, and where there are no concurrent specifications. A sequential decimal numbering (1.1; 1.2, 2.1; 2.2 etc) should be used where there are different and concurrent programme specifications

Section 2: Educational aims of the programme

To equip students with knowledge and understanding

- of language and linguistic behaviour in a broad sense, including structural, social, psychological aspects of language, in spoken and written form.
- of language as a uniquely human attribute, and of communication systems used among other species (Benchmark statement: defining principles)
- of the fact that language and linguistics behaviour are highly structured and that the nature of these structures can be elucidated by systematic study through a range of theoretical and empirical methodologies (Benchmark statement: defining principles)
- of basic concepts, modes of analyses and theoretical approaches in several areas of study known as "levels of analysis", in particular of phonetics, phonology, morphology, syntax, semantics, pragmatics and discourse.
- of the role of language in society, the way language is acquired, and the way it changes.
- of the history of the field of Linguistics, of the methodologies used to investigate language, and of the ethical issues involved in collecting and storing data from informants.
- To develop generic intellectual skills notably those of analysis, synthesis, evaluation and coherent presentation – in self-directed graduates possessing a high degree of literacy and linguistic competence.
- To develop subject-specific skills, such as basic techniques for collecting, transcribing and storing data, lucid and critical presentation of theories and reliable data;
- To develop key transferable skills emphasising self-motivation and self-reliance, co-operative interpersonal relations, information management, analysis, communication and critique.

Section 3: Learning outcomes of the programme
The award route provides opportunities for students to develop and demonstrate knowledge and understanding, qualities, skills and other attributes in the following areas:
A. Knowledge and understanding
Learning outcomes	Teaching, Learning and Assessment Strategies
 A. Knowledge and understanding of: 1. Basic concepts, modes of analyses and theoretical approaches in different levels of analysis: phonetics, phonology, morphology, syntax, semantics, pragmatics and discourse. 2. The role of language in society, bilingualism, language and gender 3. The history of the field and methodologies used to study language 4. The way language is acquired and the way it changes under different influences. 	Teaching/learning methods and strategies Acquisition of 1 is through study of core modules at levels one (introduction to Linguistics 1) and two (Foundations of Linguistics 1) Acquisition of 2 is through a module at level one (Introduction to Linguistics 2) and various options at level 3. Acquisition of 3 is through a module at level 2 (Foundations of Linguistics 2), and the project module at level 3. Acquisition of 4 is through a module at level 1 (Introduction to Linguistics 2) and options at level 3. Throughout, the learner is encouraged to undertake independent study and to participate in group or individual projects, assignments, oral presentations in class, to practise using relevant computer software and web-based exercises, as appropriate for different areas of study.

D Transferable Skills and other attributes

D Transferable skills and other attributes	Teaching/learning methods and strategies
 Thinking and judging independently The ability to work autonomously under pressure and to meet deadlines. The ability to work co-operatively as a constructive team member. The ability to make competent use of a range of information and communications technology for gathering and managing information. 	Skill 1 is practised by independent reading, discussions in seminars and the preparation of essays for coursework. Skill 2 will be fostered by the requirement to manage and progress coursework assignments and to submit them on time. Skill 3 will be developed through teamwork in joint oral presentations for seminars (Introduction to Linguistics 2). Skill 4 will be developed by the requirement to research assignments using Web-based and other electronic resources, and to submit all written coursework in word-processed format.

a) MAR

Yes

- b) Approved MAR variant (insert variant)
- c) Non MAR

Section 7: Student learning: distinctive features and support

- · 2 hours per week contact throughout in all taught modules
- Independent learning through web-based exercises.
- Teaching predominantly in seminar groups not exceeding 20 in number.
- Regular setting and feedback on formal and informal assignments

Section 8 Reference points/benchmarks

- Subject benchmarks : QAA Benchmark statement for 'Linguistics' (2001)
- SEEC Credit Level Descriptors 2001.
- UWE teaching and learning and assessment policies.
- PCEP: Approval of New Programmes & Award Routes: Guidance Notes on Documentation to be Submitted (2001-02) (September 2001).

This specification provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and the learning outcomes that a typical student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if he/she takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided. More detailed information on the learning outcomes, content and teaching, learning and assessment methods of individual modules can be found in module specifications. These are available on the University Intranet.

Programme monitoring and review may lead to changes to approved programmes. There may be a time lag between approval of such changes/modifications and their incorporation into an authorised programme specification. Enquiries about any recent changes to the programme made since this specification was authorised should be made to the relevant Faculty Administrator.
