First Media Design School's Curriculum

- Advanced Diploma in Fashion Design & Merchandising Programme (2 years)

Module 1: Design Fundamentals (Foundation)

- Fashion Details
- Colour Theory
- Fashion Workshop

This module will introduce students to the fundamentals of design. They will learn to identify and apply the basic theories of colour, principles of design and psychology of colours to their work, as well as, develop basic drafting skills. They will learn to identify various sewing materials and will be taught how to operate an industrial sewing machine.

Module 2: Design Studies (Foundation)

- Art Direction
- Mixed Media Drawing and Rendering
- Fashion History

This module aims to equip students with the basic principles of layout using various fixed dimensions including paper, screen and display environments. They will also master the art of manipulating visual components into compositions, respecting flow, visual hierarchy and harmony while taking other important components into consideration. There will be a strong emphasis on legibility, consistency and typographical visual structures. A study on ancient and contemporary fashion history and fashion design will be explored.

Module 3: Fashion Studies (Foundation)

- Fashion Technical Drawing
- Fashion Illustration
- Fashion Drafting

This module will focus on imparting hand-rendered design techniques to students, hence providing future designers with a wider range of graphic generating skills. This will allow our students to have more freedom in expressing their creativity, as they will be less reliant on using computer graphics as a design tool, which will in turn reduce any limitations they may face during the design process.

Module 4: Fashion Technical Studies

- Pattern Draping
- Sewing Techniques
- Textile Design

At the end of this module, students will be able to drape and construct basic garments from fabrics. They will learn to identify various sewing materials and will be taught how to operate an industrial sewing machine. Students will also learn how to create textile designs using a variety of manual techniques to print designs onto fabric. This module will also focus on equipping students with an in-depth understanding of the application of draping techniques used during the making of simple muslins and toiles from chosen sketches or fashion photographs, as well as, teaching them the standard industrial sewing techniques used for the construction of bodies, skirts, sleeve and collars.

Module 5: Design Appreciation

- Apparel Design

- Fashion CAD
- 3D Design

In this module, students will be exposed to the software applications that are commonly used in the fashion industry. Students will also explore various aspects of women's wear in the contemporary market. They will explore creative pattern cuttings used in "avant garde" garments tailoring. Current trends in 3D fashion designs will also form as part of their experimentation of ideas in this module. The knowledge and skills gained in this module can be applied to the creation of their fashion collection.

Module 6: Design Management

- Fashion Merchandising
- Integrated Marketing Communication (IMC)
- Fashion Retail Management

In this module, students will understand the difference between merchandising and marketing, and will understand how retail institutions operate. They will also learn about merchandise planning, budgeting, OTB planning, sales forecasting and assortment planning. This module also aims to teach students about the aspects involved in production, distribution and control and fashion business in general.

Module 7: Design Major

This module will provide students with a clear understanding of the complete design process, from research to execution. To complete this module, students have to design a portfolio that will be an accurate representation of their work as a fashion designer. Students will also produce a final fashion collection in the form of 3D garments, using the various production techniques learnt in past modules and in accordance with standards of the commercial fashion industry.

Module 8: Professional Studio Practice

In the final module of the programme, students will take on an internship and will be mentored by highly experienced industry experts. This module will enable the student to work together with creative directors, art directors and other project managers, which will in turn develop the student's conceptual and execution skills within a live studio environment. In the event whereby training work permit is not granted, FMDS will offer "Live Projects" as an alternative for internship

Section 6: Assessment Regulations

A: Approved to University Academic Regulations and Procedures

Section 7: Student learning: distinctive features and support

Structure:

The structure of the programme is designed to offer students who have established basic principles and issues before options for entering the one-year programme (Term 1-4). This is based upon the rationale that students should have a good understanding of a range of methods for developing creative ideas before embarking upon further study that involves working within one of the specialised disciplines on offer within the programme.

The structure of the programme is designed with the following compulsory modules (from UWE Level 2 Semester 2 and Level 3 Semester 1 & 2):

1. Creative Analysis
2. Visual Culture Independent Project
3. Developing Practice in Fashion 2
4. Self-Directed Study in Fashion, Textiles & Communication
5. Professional Practice in Fashion & Textiles 3

Teaching and learning methods

FMDS will apply the teaching and learning methods of UWE. The teaching and learning methods are designed both to establish understanding of the subject and to stimulate evaluation and critique of practices within it together with their own progress and achievements. These approaches are based upon the view that evaluative skills are crucial to individual success as a practitioner after graduation.

FMDS will make the following adjustments as listed below:

Programme Delivery

i. Module Specifications and Project Briefs

FMDS will add the Singapore context without changing the module specification and learning outcomes. Refer to sample of module and project brief attached separately; In meeting the curriculum requirements and delivering the content, we will keep in mind and emphasize the importance of defining their roles and identity as a designer in Singapore. There will be a lot of research and thinking process involved to produce outcomes that meet the brief requirements.

Reading List and References

FMDS will expand reading lists (books & magazines), website references and include names of Singapore designers/organization/agencies as part of their research where necessary; Students could also surf websites like herworldPLUS or Style.com or Fashionista.com etc for further research. The Library is a newly open library just for designers and it is conveniently located at Keong Siak Road, which is next to FMDS campus. We will discuss with The Library for a collaboration to expand the support for students' research work.

Arts and Design books available at the Singapore National Library are also a good source of research materials.

<http://www.nlb.gov.sg/>
<http://www.herworldplus.com/>

iii. Industry Collaborators

FMDS will invite local industry practitioners cum our industry collaborators, (e.g fashion designers such as Thomas Wee, Alfie Leong, Daniel Loh, Sven Tan and Pauline Ning) as guest lecturers for critics and to give talks. This provides opportunities for students to be challenged and evaluate their work with the current trend and standard of design in Singapore;

iv. Singapore Fashion Design Events

FMDS will organize and monitor the participation of students in local fashion design events, talks/seminars and exhibition that help students understand the importance of having a cultural identity as a designer in Singapore. Such events include the annual Audi Fashion Festival, the Womens Fashion Week and the Digital Fashion Week, which show case a wide range of fashion products like French haute couture, international fashion labels, established local fashion designers as well as upcoming local fashion labels. These events are jointly organised by local fashion entities like TAFF, (The Textile and Fashion Federation) and SPRING Singapore, which grooms young fashion business startups and other private organisations.

<http://www.taff.org.sg/>

v. Design Competitions and Live Projects

FMDS will source, evaluate and adopt live projects or design competitions with local context as project briefs for module such as Preparation for self-directed study in Fashion Design. For example, FMDS received an invitation for participation in various fashion design competitions like the "Sustainability Fashion Design" competition, organised by the Japanese Creative Centre (JCC), the Star Creation fashion design competition by TAFF, the Visual Merchandising competition by TAFF among others. These competitions allow students to test their skills and talents, which will be pit amongst other young talents from the Asian region. This project allows designers, artist and students to have their visions imprinted onto the fashion history of Singapore and the world at large. As one of the member of TAFF we received first hand information will help us get students to be actively involve in design competitions.

3. Assessments criteria to ensure student's deliverables and learning outcome are equivalent to honors degree level

i. Scope of Research:

Unlike when they are in the advanced diploma level, students are expected to expand their scope, do analysis and apply the best methods when conducting research. Such methods include videography, interviews, surveys, books, newspapers/magazine articles and etc. They can no longer rely only on online resources and information as point of reference. It is a must that students present their work-in-progress at various assessment points and final critique. In this manner, staff could continuously review and assess the scope and methods of research to help students meet the expectations for degree programmes.

ii. Self-directed Study

Students from degree programme are expected to be more independent to read up recommended materials (books & magazine), participate in relevant workshops, and attend events (external & internal) to equip themselves with practical skills and knowledge that are required to meet learning outcomes. They will be assessed in these areas with evidences of their engagement with such activities that are documented in the journal/file.

ii. Documentation of Research and Design Development

Students in the degree programme are expected to compile a Reflective Journal/Module file that clearly document their thought process and design development. The amount of information collected is expected to be comprehensive and evidenced the quality of outcome produced. Compilation of information for their journals/files must show that they have done sufficient analysis and organized them in a manner that enable assessor to understand their thought process.

Items required include:

- Module and Projects briefs
- Planning which include timeline
- Notes and records of comments from talks, lectures and workshops
- Collected work which influences them or reference material and practitioners (contemporary and historical) that have impact on their design development
- Idea generation with mind maps and sketches
- Reflections and evaluation on their progress and learning for the whole module

iv. Presentation and Communication skills

Beside presentation for final assessment, students from degree programme are also expected to discuss their work-in-progress within group seminars/tutorials and express their thought clearly during critique sessions. For diploma level, students are only required to deliver a short presentation of th
